This is the fourteenth of an annual series of summary reports on major mines of Nevada. Sand and gravel operations are not included. Information on employment and production for the calendar year 2002 was provided by the individual mine operators. The Nevada Division of Minerals maintains a complete register of Nevada mines. For further information, contact them at 400 W. King, Suite 106, Carson City, Nevada 89703 or call (775) 684-7040, fax (775) 684-7052, or visit their Web site at http://minerals.state.nv.us.

Proprietary information.
The Nevada mineral industry led the nation in 2002 in the production of gold, silver, and barite as it has for several years. Nevada also produced a wide variety of other mineral and energy commodities such as aggregates, diatomite, dolomite, geothermal energy, gypsum, lapidary and gem stones, lime and limestone, lithium compounds, magnesium compounds, oil, perlite, salt, silica, and specialty aggregates and clays. The total value of Nevada’s mineral production in 2002 was about $2.8 billion (not including oil and geothermal energy). The production of precious metals accounted for about $2.5 billion.

Production Highlights

Nevada’s gold production was 7,732,000 troy ounces in 2002. This is lower than the 8,125,000 ounces produced in 2001, but still enough to make Nevada the third largest producer of gold in the world, behind only South Africa and Australia. Underground operations contributed about 27% of the gold production in 2002, higher than the 20 percent in 2001. Silver production dropped to 13,564,000 troy ounces, compared to the 2001 production level of 17,452,000 ounces. Nevada’s nickname of the “Silver State” is still appropriate. Gypsum production was about 2.1 million tons, unchanged from 2001.

Employment

According to the Nevada Department of Employment, Training, and Rehabilitation, the Nevada mining industry employed 8,998 employees for the last quarter of 2001 and the first three quarters of 2002, the latest yearlong period for which employment figures are available. The average pay for mineral industry employees was $61,578 for this time period, the highest average of any employment sector in the state. In addition, it is estimated that there are over 44,000 jobs in the state relating to providing goods and services needed by the mining industry. Mining employment dropped for the fourth year in a row due primarily to the planned closure of some precious metal mines and a slowdown in the development of new precious metal mines.
Taxes and Other Impacts

The taxes paid by the mining industry to state and local government include property taxes, sales and use tax, and unique to the mining industry, net proceeds of minerals tax. Based on information from the Nevada Department of Taxation, the property taxes paid by the mining industry in 2002 totaled $22.0 million. The amount of net proceeds of minerals taxes in 2001 was $21.4 million with $11.4 million going to the counties and $10.0 million going to the state. Based on industry surveys, the sales and use taxes paid in 2001 were $48.3 million.

Permitting and Reclamation

Before mining can take place, plans of operation must be submitted and permits must be obtained from federal and state agencies to ensure that other resources such as wildlife, air, and water are protected. Nevada and federal laws and regulations require that lands disturbed by mining activities must be rehabilitated so they can be used for other purposes once mining is completed. This process, called reclamation, returns mined areas to other productive uses such as livestock grazing, wildlife habitat, or new industrial applications. To ensure that reclamation is done, mine operators are required to post reclamation bonds that are held by government agencies. The bonds are released only after the mined area is stabilized and the reclamation goals have been met. According to the Nevada Division of Environmental Protection, approximately $560 million in reclamation bonds are currently posted. Mine operators are proud of their efforts and are constantly seeking ways to enhance their reclamation technology.

Gold Reserves

Nevada’s reported gold reserves at or near currently operating mines that can be mined at a profit under current economic conditions stood at about 64 million troy ounces at the end of 2002. The amount of reserves is always in a state of flux, due to some reserves being lost to production, additions to reserves through new discoveries, and changing economic conditions. Notwithstanding nearly 8 million ounces produced in 2002, statewide reserves are down by only 3 million ounces from the 67 million ounces reported for the end of 2001. The price of gold and the cost of production are the main factors in determining whether a reserve is really a reserve or just a sub-economic resource. Extensive gold resources, not currently economic, exist at or near many operations. An increase in the gold price would mean many companies would be able to reclassify their resources back into reserve category. An increase in the cost of regulatory compliance has the same effect as a lowering of the gold price, thus increasingly complex and expensive regulations can reduce reserves. Under current conditions, the existing proven reserves are sufficient to sustain gold production at current levels for over 8 years.

Exploration

Exploration for new deposits, particularly gold, is an ongoing effort by both the producing companies and many others who do not operate mines in the state. Each year, the Division of Minerals conducts an exploration survey to determine the level of exploration activity and the factors that are responsible for those levels. The respondents to the latest survey indicated they spent $66.6 million on exploration in Nevada in 2002 and projected spending $69.4 million in 2003. The respondents reported having 128 geologists on their payrolls in 2002, and projected an increase to 140 geologists in 2003. Existence of favorable geology was the most important factor influencing the level of the respondents’ activity, while commodity prices were the second most important factor. Exploration geologists and the drillers, assayers, and others who support their activities, represent a significant positive economic impact, particularly in Nevada’s rural areas.

Minerals Other Than Gold and Silver

Minerals besides gold and silver are also important to Nevada’s economy. Industrial minerals such as barite, diatomite, dolomite, gypsum, limestone, lithium compounds, magnesite, perlite, salt, and specialty clays are produced in the state. Sand, gravel, and crushed stone are critical to the building requirements of the state’s infrastructure.

Oil and gas exploration and production is a relatively small industry when compared to mining, but is nonetheless important to the economy of east-central Nevada. In oil field terms, Nevada is considered a frontier, meaning its potential has yet to be realized. Oil production in 2002 was about 553,000 barrels (42 gallons per barrel) with an average value of $17.91 per barrel for a total calculated value of $9.91 million. This compares with an oil production of about 571,000 barrels in 2001. Nevada oil is used for the production of kerosene, diesel, boiler fuel, and asphalt. No natural gas is... commercially produced in the state although minor amounts of gas produced from some wells are used to fuel onsite equipment.

Nevada is rich in geothermal resources, and is second only to California in the production of geothermal power. Currently, Nevada has 14 plants at 10 locations that sold approximately 1.3 million megawatt hours of electricity in 2002. This is enough to power about 80,000 typical homes. Geothermal heat is also used for a variety of commercial, domestic, and public applications in Nevada. Mining and agriculture are among the beneficiaries of geothermal heat. Schools in Elko County, and homes and commercial buildings in Lincoln and Washoe Counties are examples of public and private facilities using this renewable energy source.

Conclusion

Nevada’s mineral industry continued to be a major economic force in the state during 2002. This situation should continue for many years to come. Challenges will exist, as they always have, but Nevada’s mineral reserves and the potential to add to them will spur the creativity of the mineral industry. During the past years of relatively low commodity prices and increasing energy costs, many producers have found ways to cut their production costs. Many companies have merged in recent years in an effort to lower overhead costs and increase synergies. They will be well positioned to take advantage of increased margins when commodity prices improve.
